

Are There Secret Societies Operating in Plain Sights?

Sixbert SANGWA • April 24, 2024

As followers of Christ, a call to be "in the world but not of it" often reverberates in our hearts, reminding us of the vigilance required in navigating worldly influences that might conflict with our faith. One such influence that has been a topic of substantial discussion and intrigue is the concept of ultra-secret societies. These organizations, while legally recognized and operating openly, are believed to have hidden agendas often shrouded in secrecy. While it might be tempting to dismiss these ideas as mere conspiracy theories, we must remember the words of Ephesians 6:12: "For our struggle is not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the authorities, against the powers of this dark world and against the spiritual forces of evil in the heavenly realms." The enemy often operates in darkness, emphasizing the importance of seeking Godly wisdom and not relying solely on worldly validated knowledge. There are numerous organizations in the business community that operate with clandestine agendas, appearing legitimate in public but harboring hidden missions. These ultra-secretive societies, legally recognized and openly operational, conceal their true purposes behind a veil of secrecy. In this article, we'll expose twelve of them.

Spotlight on Ultra-Secret Societies

The Society of Jesus (Jesuits):

Publicly, the Jesuits, an order within the Catholic Church, are known for their strong commitment to education, missionary work, and charitable services. They run numerous colleges, universities, and schools worldwide, impacting millions of lives with their commitment to social issues. Yet, theories suggest that the Jesuits, behind the scenes, are part of a broader clandestine network, subtly influencing global politics, economy, and culture under the guise of their work. Their extensive reach in education could serve as a powerful tool for shaping public opinion according to their hidden agendas.

The Freemasons

The Freemasons are a fraternal organization that promotes moral and spiritual values through symbolic ceremonies. They're known for their significant philanthropic contributions and community service, impacting societies at a grassroots level. Yet, some believe that they hold secret rituals and exert a hidden influence over global events, primarily through their members holding positions of influence in society. The rituals and practices, seen as eccentric and archaic, are thought to be a cover for more nefarious activities.

The Bilderberg Group

The Bilderberg Group hosts an annual private conference of 130-150 influential individuals from Europe and North America, including politicians, business leaders, and academics. Publicly, they discuss megatrends and major issues facing the world. However, its secretive nature and absence of a public record of their discussions have led to accusations of the group making decisions about global politics and economics behind closed doors, influencing policies and decisions that affect millions of people worldwide.

The Club of Rome

Publicly, the Club of Rome is a global think tank that deals with world political issues and promotes understanding of global challenges. Their research and discussions are often centered on sustainability and global growth. Yet, it has been accused of being a cabal manipulating world affairs for their own interests, using their influence to shape policies and norms. Critics suggest that the Club's focus on sustainability and global governance might be a cover for their efforts to establish a new world order.

The Trilateral Commission

This organization, created by private citizens of Japan, Europe, and North America, supposedly fosters closer cooperation among these regions. They engage in high-level, semi-official discussions and networking to promote shared interests. However, some theorists argue it is a group working towards establishing a single global government, using its influence to subtly modify governmental and societal actions to suit its hidden agenda.

The Council on Foreign Relations (CFR)

The CFR is an American nonprofit think tank specializing in U.S. foreign policy and international affairs. It's known for its comprehensive research work and is often considered an authoritative voice on global affairs. However, due to its influential member list and supposedly secretive meetings, it's often viewed with suspicion, with some believing it works to further undisclosed agendas. Critics suggest that the CFR's recommendations and reports might be a part of a larger plan to influence U.S. foreign policy to suit their clandestine objectives.

The Round Table

The Round Table, once a group of Britain's most influential men who aimed to promote Britain's interests worldwide, were involved in journalism, politics, and academia. While they are not as active today, some theorists believe the group still exists and influences British foreign policy subtly, pushing for decisions that favor their hidden goals. Their influence is said to be seen in the alignment of British foreign policy with their supposed objectives.

The Skull and Bones

The Skull and Bones, a secret society at Yale University, is known for its powerful alumni, including presidents and other influential figures. On the surface, it is a college fraternity, but there is speculation that they exert significant influence over American politics through their alumni network. This influence is often attributed to the number of its members who hold high office, suggesting that they could be working to further hidden agendas.

The Rosicrucians

The Rosicrucians, a cultural, educational, and philosophical organization, promote mystical wisdom. It is open to the public and offers courses in mysticism and ancient wisdom. Yet, it's believed to harbor hidden knowledge and exert secret influence, using its teachings to subtly guide the actions of its members. Critics suggest that the group's focus on mysticism and ancient wisdom might be a means to recruit and influence individuals for their hidden objectives.

The Bohemian Club

The Bohemian Club, known for its annual gathering of the most powerful men in the world, is often accused of making key decisions in secret during the gatherings. Publicly, it's a place for the wealthy and powerful to unwind and network. Yet, the secretive nature of their gatherings and the high-profile membership of the club have led to accusations of clandestine decision-making, influencing global events.

The Knights of Malta

The Knights of Malta, a historic Christian order, are revered for their charitable works, providing medical aid and emergency relief worldwide. However, some believe that they control significant wealth and wield immense political power behind the scenes, using their network to influence decisions and policies. These critics suggest that the Knights' extensive charitable work and diplomatic connections provide them with a platform to exert influence at a global level.

The World Economic Forum (WEF)

The WEF, renowned for its annual meeting at Davos, Switzerland, where global leaders in business, politics, and academia gather, is seen as a force for good, fostering public-private cooperation. Yet, it's alleged by some to play a role in shaping the global agenda in accordance with a clandestine mission, using its platform to subtly guide the actions of the world's most powerful individuals. Critics argue that the Forum's influence in setting global agendas and its emphasis on global governance might be indicative of a larger hidden agenda.

The United Nations: A Pilot for A One-World Government?

The United Nations and world governments, theoretically established to serve public interests, are frequently accused of being under the influence of these secret societies. These groups allegedly manipulate these entities to appoint or remove world leaders according to their clandestine agendas. Critics argue that the UN's role in coordinating global policy and its influence over world governments might be part of a plan to establish a one-world government. However, as Proverbs 21:1 states, "The king's heart is a stream of water in the hand of the Lord; he turns it wherever he will." This scripture reminds us that, ultimately, God is in control.

Conclusion

While the existence of ultra-secret societies may be dismissed as conspiracy theory, as Christians, we must remember to put on the full armor of God (Ephesians 6:11). We should be wary of knowledge validated solely by worldly means, such as academia, media, or human-validated sources. Instead, let us seek wisdom from God and stay rooted in our faith, for "the Spirit of truth...will guide you into all the truth" (John 16:13). Our ultimate allegiance is to God, who is greater than any worldly power.
